

PROTECT YOURSELF AND YOUR FAMILY

Information and communication technology (ICT) has changed much throughout the years and is constantly evolving to enrich our lives with its potential. The Internet makes available a wealth of information and services from all around the world to everyone at the click of a button. However, every good thing has its flaws and the Internet is no different. The exponential growth in internet use exposes users to potential threats such as computer viruses and hackers that can mine personal information such as bank accounts details, access private emails and commit other cyber crimes such as the exploitation of children. One way of fighting off these dangers is by committing to cyber safety and security. We would like to share some of the ways to protect yourself and family when going online.
