The Services

The APEC Secretariat is seeking proposals for the APEC Economic Policy Report 2023: Structural Reform and an Enabling Environment for Inclusive, Resilient and Sustainable Businesses.

1. Background

In all economies, the private sector drives growth and employment creation. Enterprises worldwide, especially in APEC economies, have aligned their business activities with sustainable economic development concepts. Among others, climate change poses challenges to enterprises, including business and supply chain disruption, rising energy and water costs, and extreme climate events harming human health.

Many governments have public policies, legal instruments, and resources to support resilient and sustainable businesses. Some governments grant preferential treatment and expanded market opportunities to enterprises that achieve particular Environmental, Social, and Governance (ESG) criteria. Despite this effort, small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs), which account for over 97% of all APEC businesses, have not been able harness this type of government support because achieving standard compliance is often too costly or difficult to navigate. In the face of a variety of environmental risks and disruptions, it is necessary for structural reforms to be tailored to the current circumstances for businesses of all sizes and particularly for SMEs. Economies addressing domestic or behind-the-border impediments through structural reform are more resilient to economic shocks, achieve greater macroeconomic stability and increased productivity, and experience higher living standards over time.<sup>1</sup> For this reason, the 2023 AEPR will focus on structural reforms to foster an enabling environment for inclusive, resilient, and sustainable enterprises, as well as on pursuing structural changes and good economic policies to stimulate innovation and increase productivity and dynamism.

For the purpose of this report, the term “sustainable” may refer to economic, environmental and social sustainability, so “sustainable businesses” are enterprises that have minimal negative impact or potentially a positive effect on the environment, society, or economy. “Enabling environment” comprises the set of conditions outside a firm’s control,<sup>2</sup> including but not limited to policy, institutional, regulatory, and infrastructure conditions, that incentivise the start-up of new firms, facilitate the innovation, operation, productivity and growth of businesses, accommodate the creation of decent jobs, encourage the transition of informal to formal firms, and generate inclusive economic growth. “Structural reforms”<sup>3</sup> are measures that change the fabric of an economy, the institutional and regulatory framework in which businesses and people operate. “Inclusive business”<sup>4</sup> is a private sector approach to providing goods, services, and livelihoods on a commercially viable basis, either at scale or scalable, to people at the base of the pyramid by making them part of the value chain of companies’ core business as suppliers, distributors, retailers, or customers. “Resilience”<sup>5</sup> is the ability to adapt successfully in the face of adversity, stress, or disruption. In other words, resilience is an indicator of the predisposition and ability to cope with a crisis.<sup>6</sup>

2. Objectives of the Project

The objective of the 2023 AEPR is to promote structural reforms that foster an environment conducive to inclusive, resilient, and sustainable businesses, including SMEs. The AEPR will address how structural reforms can address barriers to these goals through specific policies and practices. In addition, innovative approaches using new technologies can be explored to improve doing sustainable business to further ensure inclusive and sustainable economic growth. The information about the structural reforms will enable APEC members to effectively create an enabling environment in which sustainable businesses can innovate, increase productivity, and contribute to the pursuit of sustainable economic development, accelerated economic recovery, and adaptation to and mitigation of climate change.

The structure of the 2023 AEPR will be as follows:

MAIN REPORT

Chapter 1: Overview of Structural Reform in APEC Economies

This chapter will explain the overview of structural reform in APEC economies as it is related to creating an enabling environment for inclusive, resilient, and sustainable business. It will first outline the importance of structural reform to this topic. It will highlight the connection between structural reform and creating business enabling environments and how policymakers can utilise structural reform to enhance economic growth. This chapter will also include information on how structural reform can be utilised to resolve present-day issues facing many APEC economies, particularly in the context of climate change, technological change, globalization, demographic changes, and COVID-19's impacts. The information on issues such as productivity and higher cost can also be explored. This chapter will also include a literature review of structural reform trends, including highlighting how economies can best tailor structural reform to foster an inclusive, resilient, and sustainable business environment. Lastly, this chapter will provide an overview of how the remaining chapters are structured and the importance of analysing the business lifecycle to understand how structural reform can be influential across the spectrum from when businesses are first initiated through closure.

Chapter 2: Understanding Good Regulatory Practices (GRPs) in the Context of Structural Reform

This chapter will define good regulatory practices and their importance to structural reform, particularly SMEs. This will include information about the characteristics and principles of GRPs, their key policies and practices and how they help foster inclusive, resilient, and sustainable economies. It will also include information about how GRPs are especially beneficial to businesses, particularly SMEs. This chapter will highlight information about how structural reforms can be institutionalised by utilizing GRP policies, processes and principles to guide how economies can improve the quality and sustainability of their business enabling environments.

Chapter 3: How Structural Reform Can Facilitate Inclusive, Resilient, and Sustainable Businesses

This chapter will focus on analysing how APEC economies can utilise structural reform to facilitate inclusive, resilient, and sustainable businesses to advance broad-based economic growth and prosperity. This chapter will be structured to align with a business' lifecycle in three primary segments: (1) motivation and preparation for market entry; (2) operating a business; and (3) business closure. This may also include insolvency and business lifecycle issues. For example, when providing information about motivation and preparation for market entry, the report will focus on information about how structural reform can make it easier to establish new businesses, encourage business formalization and expand access to credit. Similarly, for operating a business, the report will include information about structural reform's impact on trade across borders, strengthened competition and enabling a competitive environment, dispute resolution, and capacity for responsiveness to shocks. For business closure, the report will detail how structural reform can facilitate efficient insolvency frameworks. This chapter will also include information about incentives and resources that can assist small businesses to adopt inclusive, resilient, and sustainable business practices. By analysing how structural reform can bolster inclusive, resilient, and sustainable businesses throughout their lifecycle, policymakers can understand various structural reform examples that could be applied to their domestic context. It will utilise the literature, case studies, and Individual Economy Reports (IERs) to explain the effectiveness of these structural reforms or policies undertaken and demonstrate how policies might be included in the broader concept of structural reforms for optimal efficacy.

Chapter 4: Cross-Cutting Factors: Innovation, Climate Change, and Inclusion

This chapter will highlight cross-cutting factors that influence all stages of a business lifecycle and must be accounted for when undertaking structural reform efforts. These factors include, but are not limited to: innovation; climate change; and inclusion of groups with untapped economic potential, such as women and indigenous populations. This chapter will utilise the literature, IERs, and case studies to identify how economies are already incorporating and promoting these factors into their enabling environment structural reforms. This may include incentives, resources, or other means economies have utilised to encourage business participation to enhance innovation, sustainability, and inclusive practices. This chapter will identify how these factors can be considered by policymakers to ensure that structural reform efforts have considered all factors in their development and implementation.

Chapter 5: Assessing Sustainability Performance in Structural Reform Efforts

This chapter will focus on how economies are tracking, monitoring, and evaluating the sustainability performance of businesses by referencing relevant research and utilizing findings from the IERs and case studies. The chapter will begin with outlining the importance of assessment to inform structural reform efforts, especially with fostering an inclusive, resilient, and sustainable environment. The information provided will highlight economy experiences implementing metrics/reporting systems with the business community, detailing lessons learned and best practices. This chapter will also include information about how economies are encouraging small business to participate in metrics/reporting systems. This may include information on additional efforts that can be done to ensure that experiences from businesses of all sizes are incorporated into structural reform efforts.

Chapter 6: Key Findings and Policy Recommendations

This chapter will summarise major considerations and recommendations about how structural reforms can facilitate the creation of an environment conducive to inclusive, resilient, sustainable businesses. It will identify areas for APEC economies to implement capacity building activities and encourage a shift towards structural reforms that enhance innovation, productivity, dynamism, and resilience over the long term. This chapter identifies factors policymakers can consider to enable the successful implementation of structural reforms that build an environment conducive to inclusive, resilient, and sustainable businesses.

The report will have an emphasis on how economies can sustain the impacts and benefits of structural reform, with recommendations spanning the short, medium, and long term. It will also identify areas for further development by the EC.

ANNEX: INDIVIDUAL ECONOMY REPORTS (IERs) AND CASE STUDIES

The annexes will include IERs and case studies contributed independently by APEC economies. IERs are expected from all economies filling out a standard questionnaire. Volunteer economies will submit short case studies with the following suggested themes:

- a) How did existing structures or legal instruments support or impede an enabling environment for an inclusive, and resilient economy?
- b) How did structural reforms and supporting policies foster an inclusive, resilient, or sustainable economy? Did these structural reforms and supporting policies offer incentives and resources to assist firms embrace inclusive, resilient, and sustainable business? How did reforms develop a business conducive to sustainable enterprises?
- c) How did your economy build support for these structural reforms? What best practices or lessons learned could you share with other economies looking to implement similar reforms?
- d) How did your economy assess the sustainability performance of an enterprise, i.e., what metrics/reporting systems are small businesses selecting to participate in and why?
- e) How did your economy incorporate factors, such as digital transformation and digital access; sustainability; and inclusion, when formulating and implementing structural reforms? What lessons learned would you share with other economies?
